Musicians seem to do best when they collaborate with others. Whether that is on the melody, lyrics, or vocals, there have been many memorable collaborations over the years. 2013 was no different. From Daft Punk teaming up with Pharrell Williams to Justin Timberlake and Jay Z taking over the world with their return to the music scene, musicians were not afraid to mix it up and collaborate this past year. Here are just three collaborations that made an impression on 2013.

“Holy Grail” – Jay Z feat. Justin Timberlake

Jay Z returns to the music scene with this jam from his smash album Magna Carta...Holy Grail. The king of hip-hop teams up with Justin Timberlake, turning “Holy Grail” into the single of the summer.

“Hold On, We’re Going Home” – Drake feat. Majid Jordan

A quiet hit that has been building momentum throughout the year, Drake’s “Hold On, We’re Going Home” featuring Majid Jordan is by far one of the best collaborations of 2013. Without Jordan, Drake’s rhymes fall flat, but together, they create such a powerful tune.

“Suit & Tie” – Justin Timberlake feat. Jay Z

Another return to the music scene from a long hiatus, Justin Timberlake teamed up with Jay Z for his first single off his first album of 2013, The 20/20 Experience. It seems whatever Timberlake and Jay Z touch turns to gold because “Suit & Tie” had everyone getting up and dancing all through the year.
