

MoMA PS1 presents Warm Up 2013

07/22/13 / Author: Samantha Baker

Every Saturday this summer, at least until September 7th, MoMA PS1 presents Warm Up 2013. For a mere 15 bucks in advance (or 18 dollars the day of), you can not only check out the MoMA PS1 exhibits but hear some great live music as well. From famed DJs to artists experimenting with sound, the lineup for Warm Up 2013 is killer. Between the satellite MoMA museum and live music, oh and let's not forget the Party Wall, there is something for everyone. Wait – what's a Party Wall? Well, the Party Wall is a temporary urban landscape by CODA, the winning design studio of the 14th annual Young Architects Program. The Party Wall is larger than life and definitely worth a peek. So why not one Saturday head out to Long Island City, dip your feet in the Party Wall pools and listen to some great live music or take a walk around MoMA PS1 and experience some mind-blowing art, I mean there is no better combination than art and live music.

Check out momaps1.org/warmup for more information and weekly lineups.